To Whom it May Concern,

I am pleased to write for Jason Vu, a current Web Development and Engineering student at Santa Clara University. As part of his high school work-study program, Jason has worked on my team at Juniper Networks from August 2019 to May 2020 in the office of the chief of staff for the Chief Financial Officer.

Jason has easily adjusted to the corporate environment and culture of Juniper Networks. He consistently demonstrates his strong work ethic and a desire to grow, which helps him balance the responsibilities of his position. His role has him flexing across multiple teams within finance, including Treasury, Payroll and Administration. This diverse set of stakeholders requires him to diligently communicate to set expectations and meet deadlines. I know this is a skill that will serve him and his community well and will ensure his success.

Halfway through the school year, Jason was presented with the opportunity to join an additional team in our Legal Operations department to help them with their intranet redesign project. I was impressed when he was willing to expand his efforts and help spread awareness of the program. This willingness to identify when opportunities present themselves and take full advantage will be an asset to any college work team that is lucky enough to have him engage with them.

In my conversations with others who interact with Jason at work we agree that he is an excellent student and dedicated to owning his success. We have been impressed with Jason's ability to take constructive feedback well, even when it pushes him out of his comfort zone. I recommend him highly and without reservation.

Sincerely,

Marisa Bejarano,

Sr. Director, Chief of Staff to the Chief Financial Officer Juniper Networks, (408) 307-1456,
